Download the BiOr indexes 1943-2020 (pdf, ca. 30 MB) and use the search function in your pdf viewer. Guidelines for authors Articles Authors are invited to submit articles to the Editorial Board, or to one of the Editors personally. After consideration by the Editorial Board, the Editor in charge of the appropriate section will inform the author of the Board's decision whether or not to publish the article. We welcome review articles: studies directly inspired by and reviewing one or more recent publication(s). Authors who have received a book for review in BiOr are encouraged to transform their text into a review article, when feasible. Note that a review article should not simply be a long review; the discussion should add value to the academic discourse. Reviews As a rule, we approach authors for reviewing books received at our editorial office. A list of books received is published in every BiOr issue. We occasionally honour requests from authors to review a specific book mentioned in these lists, or to request and review an important book that was not previously received. Reviews and articles should be written in correct English, French, or German. Please have your text corrected by a native speaker before submission. The title description given in our cover letter should be used as heading of the review. In a review article, the title description(s) of the reviewed book(s) should be mentioned in the first footnote. The reviewer's name and place of residence/institutional affiliation should form the last line of the review. Reviews should consist of ca. 1000-3000 words. If the review is longer or requires illustrations, we encourage the reviewer to write a (review) article instead. Reviews should be submitted no later than 7 months after the book has been dispatched to the reviewer. Articles may be either an independent study, or a study directly inspired by and reviewing one or more recent publication(s) (= review article). A review article should not simply be a long review; the discussion should add value to the academic discourse. Articles should contain the following elements: (1) concise title, clearly indicating the subject; (2) author's name; (3) short abstract - max. 250 words; (4) body text - min. 4,000 and max. 20,000 words approximately; (5) author's place of residence/institutional affiliation, and date (month and year). With an article, the use of a limited number of illustrations is possible, but not encouraged. Please include separate .jpg or .tiff files (min. 300 dpi). Line drawings are preferred over photographs. Copyright Bibliotheca Orientalis incl. BiOr online is a hybrid open access journal with an embargo period of three years. This means that authors may not publish their article or review published in BiOr in print or on the World Wide Web - including websites such as Academia.edu and open-access repositories - until three years after publication. Authors may upload a digital offprint of their published article or review on the institutional online repository of their own university, and use it for teaching purposes under the condition that NINO and Peeters are properly credited. If you wish to publish your article immediately on open-access sites, please contact the publisher, Peeters Publishers, with regard to the payment of the article processing fee. Box 95152300 RA LeidenThe Netherlands The Bibliotheca Hagiographica Orientalis is a catalogue of Arabic, Coptic, Syriac, Armenian, and Ethiopian hagiographic materials, including ancient literary works on the saints' lives, the translations of their relics, and their miracles, arranged alphabetically by saint. It is usually abbreviated as BHO in scholarly literature.[1] The listings include MSS, incipits, and printed editions. The BHO along with the Bibliotheca Hagiographica Graeca and Bibliotheca Hagiographica Latina are the most useful tools in the research of literary documents concerning the saints.[2] Editions Bibliotheca hagiographica orientalis, ed.
